

Hi everyone,

I hope you've enjoyed this lovely sunny week! I know it might have been too hot for some of you!

The next topic for Home Learning is sport. I know this is something we have different opinions in Year 2, so I'm looking forward to hearing your responses. I bet some people have got some really strong feelings about the sports they are missing, whereas for others, it's not so much of a problem!

Whilst we are thinking about sport-I've got something to tell you that I'm really proud of. A while ago, I told you that I couldn't go on a run with Dan because he was too fast and I found it tricky. Whilst we have not been at school, we have been running 2 mornings a week for Pippa's morning exercise (Pippa is great at this because she sprints to chase the ducks along the canal!). After a few weeks practise I can proudly say that I can keep up with Dan most of the time 😊 I'm thinking of making the run a little longer next week-I'll keep you posted.

I've been lucky enough to spend this week in school. I've been telling everyone about Pompeii and how volcanoes work! In the evenings, we have been working on the shed. This week, we had to cut down some ivy which had grown next to a building nearby. It was very thick and dusty. Pippa helped by catching the pieces and shaking them! In the picture, you can't see her face because she has jumped up to catch a piece in mid-air! I also went on a walk with my friend at the weekend. She showed me a brand new footpath which was great to explore. I'd love to know about some good walks that you might have been on.

Thank you so much to those of you who have sent emails through (no pressure if you haven't had chance). It really brightens my day to hear from you and see pictures of what you have been doing.

All my love, and extra licks from Pippa (although she has started eating poo...so you might not want these haha)

Miss Clayton xx
