

Dear Year Six,

Another week has trundled by and if you are anything like me you might be starting to struggle to think of ideas of ways to keep yourself entertained. I've started to write lists of jobs I need or should do, although I think I'm now scraping the barrel when I add onto it, "Organise sock draw!"

Mr Rose has been sending teachers tasks to do at home and Mr Warrener and I have been busy writing your school reports - we have embraced technology and have been having face time meetings, check us out! Usually I natter while he types, you all know how bad my spelling is!

This week I made a strawberry mousse cake, although my local co-op had run out of caster sugar so I tried making it with granulated sugar - can't be much different? It was not very successful - it sank. My mum, who is a far better baker than me, suggested that I ground the granulated sugar in a coffee grinder to make caster sugar but if I'm honest no cake is worth that much effort.

As you can tell I've not been into school last week but this week but I am, and I'm looking forward to catching up with the other teachers and spending time with the key workers' children - who are a gorgeous bunch of kids. It's been a fun challenge finding activities to entertain a wide age range of children. Although I have found anything which involves glue, paints and generally making a mess goes down well, not much different to teaching you lot.

The other teachers and I are working on a surprise for you to let you know how much we all miss you, can't say too much but it's been a lot of fun to be involved with. We will be sending out some more work activities next week, don't stress too much but they are a good way of keeping your brains ticking over - remember you can email us any of your work for us to have a look at, or just to say hello.

Bye for now, missing you all

Mrs Tobin and Mr Warrener
