

Dear Year Six,

How are we all doing this week? The weather has taken a cooler turn so no more playing in the garden for a few days. I for one am quite glad as it means I can put my jeans and dungarees back on!

I have emailed a PowerPoint home to your parents which is the first one in our PSHE topic – Puberty. I suggest you read the PowerPoint with a trusted adult, just in case you have any questions. I think it's really important that you are prepared for the next stage of growing up especially as high school is beckoning.

There have been some upsetting scenes on the news recently both here and in America. However, there has also been lots of positive scenes of people standing up against racism and discrimination. We have put together some resources for you to look at to help you understand a little bit more about racism and discrimination. They are on the school website.

It feels a little bit as if life is going back to normal with a few more children back to school and some more shops beginning to open. It's normal to have a mix of emotions about life at the moment so make sure you take time to discuss how you're feeling with a trusted adult.

There are lots of activities on the school website to keep your brain active. Try to check them out and remember to send me any of the work you have completed. I always enjoy receiving your emails.

Take care of yourselves,

Mrs Tobin
